Dear John:

I was answering your last letter when your second came.

To re-capitulate:

It seems rather late in the day for any regrets expressed in your first letter. I repeat -

I let Camilla come to England because you

I came myself, <sup>wished it -</sup> knowing that I should be ill most of the time, as I still am.

Owing largely to my health & your unpreparedness (one school is not enough to choose from) there is now nothing to be done this term - i.e. until after the Easter holidays - So we have still a month before us. I should have thought it was your business, & to your advantage, to have had half-a-dozen places in view. The matter is fair to <sup>important</sup> ~~be~~ to be settled off-hand.

I came over prepared to meet your wishes. During these weeks you have done extremely little to meet mine, up to a point when I see, one & for all, that our exchange went is final. Now the only point at which I can meet you is the first - one, that it may be better for Camilla to pass sometime in England, until I can insure her a suitable home with me, either in this country, or elsewhere.

I repeat: I came over & allowed her to come in an endeavor to meet your wishes. Not one of mine has had any ~~assistant's~~ consideration. Nor do you offer much, & your threats are hardly an ice-cutter. I have considerable business to transact with Foster, & will see him before the end of the week.

As to her linen: I have a receipt for 19/6 for the last woolies, handkerchiefs. I sent her ten days ago at your request. So it is now your turn.

You have sent me no receipt from Ade

Sondie as ~~far~~ you promised.

I went over to-day: She is very well again, & if she remains so I am taking her to the dentist on Friday. At the same time I will make an appointment at your sister-in-law's -

You suggested that it would be possible to send your office boy for me journey in to Town. Could you do this on Friday, & I will take her back? It will be a long day. He could bring her to the dentist in the morning where I could meet her. Let me know, & I will telephone the time.

I do not understand why, wishing her to have an English education, you were not prepared with a dozen possible schools.

Yours.

D. J.
